

HERE'S ABOUT THE TIME WHEN THE WORD "OVERCOAT" IS UPPERMOST IN ALL MINDS

Overcoats made in a particular way for particular men are here, then, for you, made by

SCHLOSS BROS. & CO.,
of Baltimore and New York

Let's See, What Style Shall It Be?

Well, all the new models are here—snappy models, with a touch of "ginger" in the patterns and a little "tobasco" in cut—the sort young chaps like.

More conservative Coats | Staple models for the
for the young business man. | older man of affairs.

Prices--

$12.50 to $35

Remember that one great point that makes or mars a Coat is the back.

The full, graceful sweep of the back.

Takes tailoring in the first place to make the shoulders from which to hang the back and draping in the back itself. Why, certainly, a custom tailor can do it, but not for $12.50 or $20.00 or $25.00 or $35.00.

Can't give you the material, either, at such prices.

Nor as good materials, inside or out.

Fact is, he can't produce any better Coat at twice the money.

Overcoats in fancy mixtures; Overcoats also in solid blacks. Some, too, that are waterproof, and some specially for auto drivers.

this implicit promise Browning has not altogether fulfilled. This seems to me the only organic flaw in the Ring and the Book. Thus, if the insertion of Book VIII is not justifiable as a promise of what shall follow, it is justifiable as a relief from what came before; and is justifiable as pursuing the historical order, and as enjoying a perfect logical affiliation with the central theme of the entire work. For, quoting for once from a place in advance of the canto under present study, we read in Book XII (832):

"Learn one lesson hence
Of many which whatever lives
Should touch:
This lesson, that our human speech
is naught
Our human testimony false, our fame
And human estimation words and wind."

This is the proposition of which the twenty thousand lines are the thesis. Books VIII and IX, therefore, actually strike nearer to this central theme, showing even more clearly than could the Count, the Canon or the Castaway, the wordy and windy quality of human judgment and human speech.

ters received the first prize, Miss Inez Boris the second, and Miss Bessie Brown the third. For the best flower, as to size and quality, Miss Elmira Bell received first prize, Mrs. Jas. BEAUTY IN SOUR MILK.

Milk naturally and artificially soured is now constantly being advised by many physicians for certain intestinal troubles, but the medicinal properties of this wonderful food are nothing new. When Abraham entertained the three angels he set before them "soured milk"; and when Moses enumerates the foods which Jehovah had given his people to eat he mentions among other excellent things the "soured milk of kine."

The setting forth of these fermented fluids expressed not only good living, but wise living, for though those ancient fathers were without the scientific knowledge of today, they had found through centuries of experiment with soured milk that it had a definitely wholesome effect upon the system. This good effect is now said
